How the grant helped a company to file and register IP in-market and support legal and documentation expenses

Company C,

a provider of proprietary software, wanted to have its IP protected as it expanded its international business by incorporating an entity in Myanmar to provide services to clients in that market.

How we supported Company C:

Grant support to the company to file and register its IP in Myanmar. The grant also supported Company C's legal and documentation expenses including those incurred in filing documents with authorities and in obtaining business licenses and permits.

How the project helped Company C:

The company successfully incorporated a fully operational legal entity in Myanmar, and was able to protect its IP for the proprietary solutions it offered to clients.
